Keolis will launch its first hop-on, hop-off bus service on the Grand River in late spring, to cover major transit points on the Flint River. The Flint River Hop On/Hop Off Service will be launching in May on a weekday loop of five stops from Flint to Pontiac and back, from Moores Square to the former U.S. Steel plant site at Gratiot. The service is scheduled to cost $1 at the Detroit Metropolitan Wayne County Airport, $2 on a Grand River Transit one-zone pass, $4 on a two-zone pass, $10 on a four-zone pass. Grand River Transit and Keolis are both owned by Regional Transit Authority of Southeast Michigan. The service will be highlighted by a display that looks like a flatbed moving vehicle, painted to look like a bus. The buses have about 15 fixed seats in and the same number of seats out, so that there is continuous seating on each bus. In the pit area at each stop, there are open tables with chairs. The stop numbers are painted on the front and back sides of the buses. A new service is expected to cut travel times between East Grand River and downtown with Flint and in the other direction, from the Wayne County Airport. On the southeast side of the city, passengers will board buses from the airport in Frank Murphy Hall at the airport. The buses will go in groups of four to the city, in series of two, stopping at Moores Square and other sites along the way. The first stop at Moores Square will be U.S. Steel's new site at Gratiot Avenue and Greenfield Avenue, for an event later this spring. There are four stops total. The second stop will be 2 miles away at the former Sumner Avenue area where the buses stop at the first stop. In total, the route travels 5.1 miles, from airport to the current 15-stop service. The current service, by comparison, travels about 6.5 miles from airport to downtown. The first five stops of the new service are: Moores Square from 10:30 a.m. to 2 p.m. on weekdays. United Farmworkers strike headquarters at 3900 Salzwedel Street on the edge of the medical campus, north of Galen Avenue and east of the airport. The new service is scheduled to be tested
