Quiz Maker was designed as an attempt to provide teachers with a convenient method of creating tests and quizzes for students. While there's no shortage of such utilities on the market, Quiz Maker appears to be promising in many aspects. It benefits from a rich array of features, behaves decently and carries out a favorable outcome for users who experiment with it. To sum up its features, Quiz Maker is able to generate tests of maximum 52 multiple choice questions, which can be entered and managed using an administrative panel. Also from this place, you can create new accounts for quiz participants by entering their username and a custom password. The admin section is password enabled, with the default login credentials located in a text file inside the installation folder. However, the admin account isn't necessarily singular, multiple such logins can be created, with custom usernames and passwords. Similar to the admin panel, the participant section also functions based on a login. The test can be launched right away (optionally in full screen) and is equipped with a timer (which can be set from the admin panel). Participants can start answering the questions right away and once they've completed the quiz, they have the possibility to check the answers and to view the final score. Also, scores can be submitted to a section called scoreboard, which is maintained by the admin. Our tests established that Quiz Maker accomplishes its job, it can be operated with ease due to its user-friendly interface, allowing users to create multiple choice quizzes in a comfortable manner.
